Emotional intelligence

WHAT IS EMOTIONAL INTELLIGENCE?

Emotional Intelligence (EI) is a set of emotional and social skills that influence the way we perceive and express ourselves, develop and maintain social relationships, cope with challenges, and use emotional information in an effective and meaningful way.

WHY IS EI IMPORTANT?

Emotional Intelligence is proven to be a key indicator of human performance and development. People higher in EI communicate effectively, form strong relationships, and create powerful coping strategies. EI can be measured – more accessibly and less controversially than IQ – and unlike IQ, it can be substantially strengthened and developed.

"If you're a leader and you want to mobilize your team, one of the first things you can do...is listen to them. Empathy is a critical skill to begin with for leaders because by listening to people and understanding where they're coming from, you'll have a better handle on how to motivate those people and what's important to them... That's the first step in your ability to influence people, and influencing people is a critical skill for leaders." DR. STEVEN STEIN, CEO MHS

THE EQ-i 2.0® FEATURES

- A Total EI score with 5 composite scores measuring 5 distinct aspects of emotional and social functioning.
- 15 Subscales that hone in on EI skills critical to workplace success.
- A Well-Being Indicator that measures your client's level of happiness; resulting in additional development opportunities.

RELIABILITY & VALIDITY

Not Reliable
Not Valid

Imagine you are attempting to shoot an arrow at a target. Your first set of shots are neither consistent (reliable) nor accurate (valid). Your second set of shots are tightly grouped, meaning you can consistently place them together, but not where you want them (i.e., on the bullseye). Your third set of shots are both consistent and accurate (i.e., reliable and valid).

Reliability and validity are important concepts to evaluate when selecting a psychological assessment for use in your business. What follows is a simple and easy to understand summary of the reliability and validity evidence of the EQ-i 2.0®.

WHAT IS RELIABILITY?

The reliability of an assessment is often referred to as its consistency. That is, how consistent it is at measuring what it aims to measure. The two most important types of reliability for assessments are:

INTERNAL CONSISTENCY

Refers to how well all the items of a certain scale measure the same idea

TEST-RETEST

Refers to how well the assessment can produce the same results over time for the same person

Overall, the EQ-i 2.0 exhibits strong reliability, both in terms of internal consistency and test-retest. This means that your clients' scores will remain stable over time (unless development efforts are used to improve their scores) and that items measuring a certain subscale all tap into aspects of that subscale (e.g., all Empathy items are measuring the idea of Empathy).

Reliable
Not Valid

Both Reliable
and Valid

THE FINE DETAILS...

Internal consistency of Total EI	Internal consistency of Composite Scales	Internal consistency of Subscales	Test-Retest (2-4 weeks)	Test-Retest (8 weeks)
.97	.88 - .93	.77 and up	.92	.81

*Any Cronbach's alpha scores above .70 are considered satisfactory; any scores above .80 are considered good, and anything above .90 is excellent.

WHAT IS VALIDITY?

Validity ensures the accuracy and usefulness of an assessment. Although there are many different types of validity, they all focus on ensuring the assessment is measuring what it was designed to measure and whether it can predict important outcomes. However, it is important to understand that there is no single number to represent the validity of a test, it is assessed through the combination of several different types of validity evidence.

The EQ-i 2.0 was developed through an extensive process that ensured its content:

- Reflects the model and scope of EI
- Truly measures the concept of EI
- Has a structure that is dependable and applicable to a wide variety of contexts (e.g., development, coaching, leadership, etc.)

WHAT VALIDITY EVIDENCE IS THERE?

The EQ-i 2.0 was originally developed in North America but has been used in all regions of the world. The structure of the test, the consistency and accuracy of the items, and the results produced have been replicated across the globe and continues to enable a wide variety of cultures and languages to use the tool effectively to measure emotional intelligence.

Overall, the EQ-i 2.0 has extensive evidence supporting its external validity:

- It has been used to predict job performance
- EQ-i 2.0 skills can be used to predict and improve leadership competencies
- The underlying structure of the EQ-i 2.0 model holds up in different regions across the world
- The EQ-i 2.0 is based on a history of assessment research spanning decades
- The EQ-i 2.0 correlates with similar emotional and social measures (i.e., convergent validity) and has been shown to be unrelated to dissimilar constructs, like intelligence (i.e., discriminant validity)

The EQ-i 2.0 is now included in the Nineteenth Buros Mental Measurements Yearbook (MMY), published in 2014 and widely considered an important marker of proper test development. The inclusion of the EQ-i 2.0 in the Buros MMY and its positive review is an important milestone for the assessment and acknowledges the scientific rigor and effort that MHS has put into its development.

WHY DOES THIS MATTER FOR YOU?

While reliability and validity matter greatly from a scientific and statistical perspective, understanding how this translates into practical terms is crucial in order to effectively integrate the EQ-i 2.0 into your business. Knowing that the EQ-i 2.0 can reliably measure EI ensures that you can always count on the consistency of the tool. Further, knowing that the EQ-i 2.0 accurately measures EI, your development efforts will have meaningful impact on increasing EI and related outcomes (e.g., job performance, leadership competencies, intrapersonal skills, etc).

For almost 20 years, consultants and organizations have trusted the science that underpins the EQ-i 2.0 (and its predecessor the EQ-i) to help improve human performance. Being the first scientifically validated measure of emotional intelligence (EI), coupled with research from premier organizations, means you can count on the EQ-i 2.0 to add robustness and accuracy to your talent management initiatives.

Incorporating Emotional Intelligence as part of leadership coaching supports higher performance. When organizations incorporate Emotional Intelligence in leadership coaching, they are 36% more likely to report effective EI performance.

- "Leadership and Emotional Intelligence: The Keys to Driving ROI and Organizational Performance." HCI Research [2013]

"The EQ-i 2.0 user's guide is impressive in its coverage of conceptual, practical (administration, scoring, interpretation, application to intervention), and technical aspects of the EQ-i 2.0. Equally impressive are the development efforts, pilot and standardization samples, and aspects of the psychometric evidence (e.g., reliability, scale structure, convergent validity, and expected differences between groups)."

- James C. DiPerna, Test review of the Emotional Quotient Inventory 2.0 (EQ-i 2.0). From K.F. Geisner, J.F. Carlson and J.L. Jonson, (eds.), The Nineteenth Mental Measurements Yearbook [2014].

RETURN ON INVESTMENT (ROI)

How does EI impact ROI?

leaders, shaping organizational culture and ultimately impacting an organization's financial performance.

Organizational development practices that utilize Emotional Intelligence result in measurable achievement, success in leadership development, and – ultimately- enhanced financial performance. Strides in leadership development produce a high-performance culture that along with other best practices from diverse disciplines in an organization, positively impact financial performance.

Although only a minority of respondent organizations prioritize investment in leadership development over other training options, those companies that do are experiencing tangible ROI through positive financial results. Organizations that spend a significant portion – 31% or more – of their Training and Development budgets on leadership development are 12% more likely to report increased revenue than those that spend less. This suggests a positive relationship between investment in Leadership Development and financial performance. Of those organizations that are high leadership development spenders, 45% report 5% or higher revenue growth rates over the prior year.

Emotional Intelligence (EI) has become a prolific topic within corporate leadership development. Original research and by the Human Capital Institute (HCI) and Multi-Health Systems (MHS) uses insights from organizational leaders surveyed in the spring of 2013 to address the usefulness and application of EI as a factor in developing

Looking at the largest gaps between individual contributors and managers, it is clear that many of the leadership skills identified in this study as important require a degree of Emotional Intelligence at their core. The EQ-i 2.0 subscales are strongly related to leadership competencies that in turn correlate with productivity, decreased employee turnover, and increased efficiency. A leader who embodies leadership competencies, is more likely to increase work satisfaction, create trust, and foster organizational commitment and loyalty.

The EQ-i 2.0 model uses four common leadership dimensions inherent to most models of leadership: Authenticity, Coaching, Insight, and Innovation (shown below).

About this research: This research study is a collaborative effort between the Human Capital Institute (HCI) and Multi-Health Systems (MHS). An online survey was conducted from April - May 2013 with 784 respondents representing more than 500 organizations worldwide.

SOME KEY RESEARCH INSIGHTS

Emotional Intelligence assessments are an inexpensive, simple and very effective way to impact leadership development. Sixty percent of those who use Emotional Intelligence assessments say they are effective or very effective. Equally efficient methods of development include executive coaching, job rotations, and global assignments.

Time and support are critical to implementing leadership development initiatives and yet, are lacking in organizations. Executives fail to support leadership development initiatives, and limited time also keeps it from becoming an organizational priority.

Incorporating Emotional Intelligence as part of leadership coaching supports higher performance. When organizations incorporate Emotional Intelligence in leadership coaching, they are 36% more likely to report effective EI performance. Want to see the full report? EI in Action: Leadership

Brian is a successful

41-year-old executive newly hired to a consulting firm that works exclusively with the United States Department of Defence. Most of Brian's direct reports are about 10 to 15 years his senior with advanced degrees. Brian's insecurities about his age, lack of a post graduate degree and inexperience with advanced research projects have been a cause of great stress since he's started his new job. He's been waiting for his colleagues to call his bluff about how far in over his head he is and this internal query has been playing on a continuous loop within Brian's head hindering his ability to perform at his best. Seeing the EQ-i 2.0 as an opportunity to sharpen his self-awareness and relationship building skills, Brian eagerly engaged in the EI process.

WHEN TO USE THE EQ-i 2.0 LEADERSHIP REPORT?

Every company has experienced instances where a leader within the organization shows strengths in core competencies necessary for the role, but may be exhibiting EI blind spots of which peers are taking notice. Or, a company finds an employee that exhibits great work ethic and is an emerging star amongst his/her peers, while showing comparable traits to leaders within the organization. In both scenarios, the Leadership Report can be used when honing in on leadership development, executive development and coaching, and developing high potential leaders. The Leadership Report examines results through four key dimensions: Authenticity, Coaching, Insight, and Innovation. The report also contains insights on the possible implications of results, and which skills have the highest potential of becoming leadership derailers. Strategies for development will be provided with the aim to attain true leadership potential, while being able to compare results against top leaders as a benchmark.

LEADERSHIP POTENTIAL PAGE

This section provides you with a leadership lens through which to view your client's EQ-i 2.0 results. A leader who embodies higher EI through the 4 key dimensions of leadership is more likely to increase work satisfaction, create trust, and foster organizational commitment and loyalty.

- If the Leadership Potential page is turned on, graphical icons will appear on every subscale page linking the subscale to the four leadership competencies.
- Leadership derailer section examines how low scores for specific EI skills may hinder leadership success.

LEADERSHIP BAR

A gold leadership bar appears on the Overview of Results page, and above all bar graphs on every subscale page. This bar represents the range of scores of the top leaders (those who EQ-i 2.0 scores were in the top 50% of the leader sample).

- Using this bar, your client can compare his or her results on the EQ-i 2.0 to those exceptional leaders who demonstrate high EI.
- Focus development efforts in areas where your client scored lower than other leaders, in order to improve leadership capabilities.

EI in Action: Workplace

The Ottawa Hospital's

Leadership Academy has incorporated the use of the EQ-i 2.0 to promote and enhance self-awareness and other essential leadership skills. Emotional Intelligence development is viewed as an integral element of professional development and the hospital focuses on EI coaching for people leaders, physicians and support staff. Hospital staff face unique challenges every day in providing patient services while managing typical workplace situations and stressors. The Hospital recognized that although doctors are experts in their chosen fields, they sometimes lack the communication, empathy, and interpersonal skills necessary to become better leaders and provide patient-focused healthcare. Research has illustrated the importance of incorporating emotional intelligence in medical admission systems above cognitive intelligence.

The importance of EI

in the medical community is represented by the emerging practice of using EI to select medical students or as an integrated training component of medical degrees. Progressive surgical programs have begun implementation of assessment and training as an established component of their curricula. The EQ-i 2.0 tool has proved to be very effective in assisting staff in non-leadership roles that may be technical experts, but struggle with personal insight. In short, understanding and dealing with one's emotions and the emotions of others in an often stressful environment is at the heart of the skills and competencies involved in EI.

LEADERSHIP | WORKPLACE

How can EI help our company manage a four generation work force?

EI in Action: EQ 360

A Global Energy Leader

employs thousands of workers, while overseeing the development and wise use of the region's energy and mineral systems. Its multigenerational, highly-diverse Executive Team identified a need to address old and new perspectives, while encouraging "thought leadership". To do this, an Emotional Intelligence Workshop was introduced with two cohorts of experienced Managers, Vice-Presidents, and Directors, with 100 participants in total. Through initial discussion, a few key issues were identified – a lack of trust, and a general apprehension within the Executive team. These two areas lend themselves to subjective interpretation, challenging conversations and sometimes combustible outcomes.

- The Profile Gap Analysis can easily highlight where raters agreed with the individual's assessment and where they did not, in one snapshot.

EQ 360 Reports provide in-depth analyses by having those who work with your client and know your client personally provide feedback in addition to your client's self-assessment. Allowing for unlimited raters (Managers, Peers, Direct Reports, Friends and Family), these observer ratings are compared with the self-assessment in order to provide your client with a 360 degree view of his or her effectiveness. These reports are designed to provide valuable insight and opportunities for development.

WHEN TO USE THE LEADERSHIP EQ 360 REPORT?

When looking at a potential, new, or existing leader within an organization, it is not only important to gain an understanding of their performance in the workplace; but also for them to gain insights into their performance as a leader by peers, direct reports and supervisors. Similar to the Workplace EQ 360, the Leadership EQ 360 Report allows for an unlimited number of raters to provide feedback and provides insights into opportunities for development. The Leadership 360 report lends itself well to a follow-up with the same group of evaluators to compare results and track progress.

WHEN TO USE THE WORKPLACE EQ 360 REPORT?

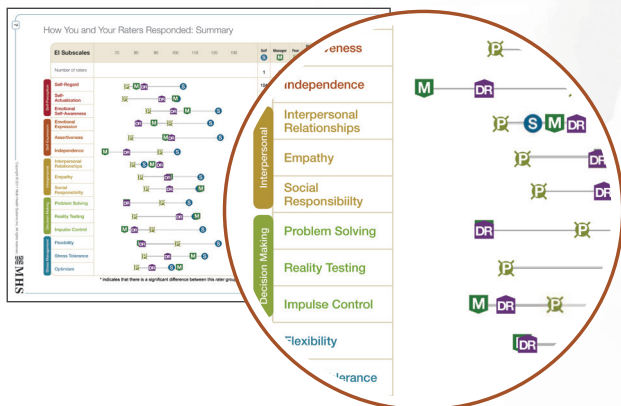

When working in an organization, it's important to be cognizant of the impact of one's actions on colleagues. The tool used to provide further insight was the EQ 360 Leadership Report, where based on the results, two critical areas required attention – Emotional Awareness and Self-Expression. By being able to leverage normative data from a scientifically validated tool that pulled from peer, subordinate, and supervisor input, the company was able to introduce a formal leadership program that led to developmental opportunities in the areas of stress management and resiliency, among other key areas.

MANAGERS AND INDIVIDUAL CONTRIBUTORS DON'T ALWAYS SEE EYE-TO-EYE WHEN IT COMES TO EI

According to an HCI Research study conducted in partnership with MHS Inc., a key research insight found that individual contributors and managers disagree about what leadership behaviors are most important in today's environment. While managers feel coaching skills are not very important, nearly twice as many individual contributors surveyed disagree.

Adaptability, problem solving, and stress tolerance are also behaviors with the largest gaps in perceived importance between individual contributors and managers. GROUP REPORT

How can EI help
teams to work more cohesively?

EI in Action: Leadership

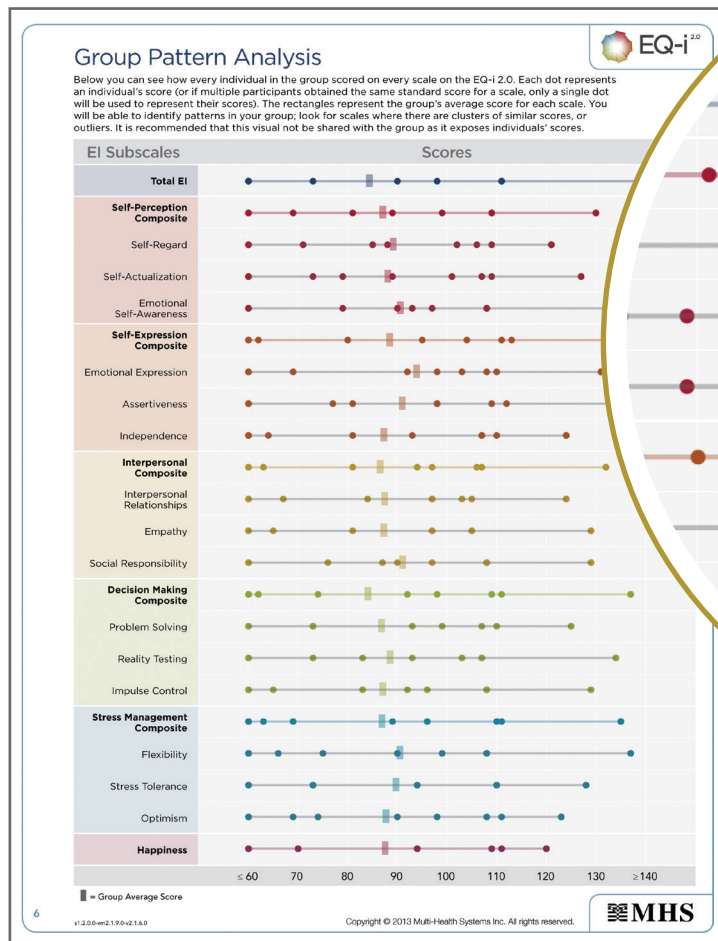

Oklahoma Gas & Electric (OGE)

implemented the EQ-i 2.0 by dividing the company into five groups: Executives, Directors, Managers, Supervisors, and Employees. The findings were very beneficial in understanding company dynamics and shed light on certain areas of improvement. The overall emotional intelligence scores, although not a cause for concern, showed some interesting things to the OGE group. All average self-report scores for each group fell within the Average or High range with Executives rating themselves higher than Employees in EI. The top results of the group on both self-report and rater-feedback scores were Problem Solving, Impulse Control and Self- Actualization. These scores are beneficial in an organizational setting because those who possess a high Problem Solving score tend to tackle problems head-on without getting distracted by their emotions and it's a crucial skill towards certain leadership traits and is correlated OG+E[®] with transformational leadership behaviors.

Regardless of whether a group works harmoniously with great collaboration and cohesion, or finds itself with conflicting opinions and strategies that can affect the balance of a group, this report can be used when looking for deeper insights into a group's strengths as well as areas where the group can be more effective. Implications at an organizational level can be examined and strategies for action can further develop the group's potential. The EQ-i 2.0 Group Report combines the scores of individuals that take the assessment in a manner that enables interpretation at a group or team level.

ORGANIZATIONAL IMPLICATIONS

This group is unlikely to be a catalyst for change in the organization, preferring to revert to a tentative approach in their interactions with others. A conservative approach is utilized in decision-making, and ideas may sometimes not be voiced during meetings. The group is unlikely to play to its strengths, and some people may be in roles that they are not suited for. There is a possibility that motivation may be low, which can spur higher levels of disengagement and turnover.

The proprietary and cutting-edge research carried out by the author led to outcomes that shed new light on management practice and strategy. The 7 Keys presented in this book, when implemented, will produce immediate results and long-term enhanced performance.

The 7 keys

- Hire capable people who love the work they do and show how they contribute to the bigger picture.
- Compensate people fairly.
- Don't overwork (or underwork) people.
- Build strong teams with shared purpose and viable goals.
- Make sure managers can manage.
- Treat people with respect and leverage their unique talents.
- Be proactively responsible by doing the right things to win the hearts and minds of your people.

STRATEGIES FOR ACTION

This page provides recommended strategies:

- Use as a tool to gain group members' commitment to agreed upon action plans.
- The 3 highest and 3 lowest EI skills are highlighted.

Impulse Control showcased their restraint and composure while Self-Actualization indicated that group members found their work meaningful, were motivated and sought new challenges. This trait is tied into many leadership competencies, such as being authentic, willing to coach others and providing a meaningful vision for others to follow. Developmental opportunities within this group were Emotional Expression, Empathy and Emotional Self-Awareness. Lower Empathy scores suggest that the group may not take the time to understand each other and the focus should be to be mindful of some issues that their peers may be sensitive towards. Emotional Expression skills can be honed by identifying instances where someone chooses not to express their feelings and being able to recognize why. Emotional Self-Awareness can be accomplished by asking for feedback from trusted colleagues about how emotions have affected them in the past. The results of the in-depth report were used to revise the Leadership Development Program to continually improve EI competencies.

HIGHER EDUCATION REPORT

students with academic, personal and future success?

EI in Action: Higher Education

At Georgia Southern University,

Philip Bruce, the Director of Career Services understood the importance of assessing students by looking at leadership development and competencies. After some initial research, Philip realized that his mission to develop EI competencies in students was achievable with the EQ-i 2.0 in-depth reports, and a discussion surrounding each student's results. He recognized that Interpersonal Skills and Emotional Expression were the most easily developed skills and can be foundational in a student's future success. The open-minded mentality and welcoming atmosphere that colleges and universities provide, aides in the development of these subscales significantly. The vast majority of students in post-secondary share similar experiences and fears when it comes to socialization, academics, and so on. This provides a very rich and productive environment for students to feel safe when expressing themselves.

WHEN TO USE THE EQ-i 2.0 HIGHER EDUCATION REPORT?

As a counselor working closely with students, it's important to be able to leverage a tool that offers insights into a student's potential for academic success, can help in increasing retention within a chosen area of study, and aid in preparation for a future career path. While working with students and understanding their lifestyle, the Higher Education Report is helpful to counselors by providing awareness on a student's emotional intelligence. To do so, three dynamic reports are available for their use: The Student Summary Report, The Student Comprehensive Report, and the Counselor's Report.

WHAT DOES THE RESEARCH SAY?

With almost 25% of first-year students leaving before their sophomore year, post-secondary life and education can be challenging. Students often feel overwhelmed, lonely, isolated, and have difficulty adjusting to the demands of college and university. Emotional intelligence is related to both grades and retention. Higher EI, specifically interpersonal and stress management skills, translate into better grades and increased persistence in post-secondary education.^{2,3}

His research and professional experiences also shone light on the fact that Independence, Impulse Control and Reality Testing are areas of struggle for students because of the nature of the public education system in North America. Everything is prescribed and comes with instructions which becomes counter-productive when students graduate and are encouraged to be independent. Georgia Southern University (GS) attempts to leverage a student's EI to increase retention, progression through the college track, and graduation with an offer for employment in an industry of the student's choice. GS's research has shown that an awareness of EI skills and strategies for developing areas of improvement have had a significant impact on retention, progression and graduation rates increasing. The ability for a student to be self-aware and do something with information, means students are being taught how to navigate the social and workplace setting of their future in a very positive way.
